

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Preface.

Art-history has become an independent science, during the period which has elapsed since Julius Hübner in the year 1856, published the first edition of his „Catalogue of the Royal Picture Gallery in Dresden", which for its time and of its kind, was worthy of all respect. Fresh light has been thrown upon the lives of a great many, perhaps the majority, of artists, through the study of archives; and by means of these researches and by comparative study of pictures, new and often surprising results have been attained concerning the authors of a considerable number of old pictures in all the collections of Europe.

The work of cataloguing has also been brought within the range of these researches, and the attempt made to regulate it according to fixed principles. The large edition of this new catalogue, which is only published in German, and rests upon the basis of all these investigations of art-history, and the requirements of the present age, although in o volume and of fairly convenient size, has becom too comprehensive a work for the needs of th numerous visitors to the Royal Picture Gallery.

The Direction has therefore simultaneousl issued this smaller edition of the catalogue, whic stands on the same basis, but omits the literar and documentary proofs and references, believin that by so doing, the wishes of the public will hav been met, the more so, as it is considerably smalle and cheaper than the previous catalogue.

This small edition will meet the requirement of all those who are content to become acquainte with the pictures as such, and to accept the result of recent investigation as they stand. Those wh desire, by the aid of more detailed description, t go more deeply into the meaning of the pictures, to learn further particulars of the artists who painte them, who seek to know the arguments in favou of the present denomination of pictures, who inter- est themselves in their origin or early history, o wish to inform themselves concerning all repro- ductions from them, must refer to the larger edition.

Although reference to the large edition for all further particulars concerning every picture, is to be taken for granted, the author has added a more special reference to the details in the „Unabridged Catalogue" to the descriptions of pictures, where he considered it necessary that great stress should be laid upon the arguments which justify his views.

In this small edition the engravings of the Official Collection of the Dresden Gallery are alone specially noted, among the reproductions of pictures. „Ph“ without further information has been placed after pictures of which photographs have been taken.

The author has to thank many of his colleagues for friendly advice and valuable information, especially Dr. L. Scheibler in Berlin for a series of critical remarks with reference to the Old German and Early Flemish and Dutch pictures in the Gallery, and Mr. Abraham Bredius in Amsterdam for much hitherto unpublished documentary information concerning many Dutch masters.

Historical Introduction.

THE Royal Saxon Picture Gallery in Dresden is essentially the creation of two princes distinguished for their ove of art and of splendour, who as Electors of Saxony ıre known as Friedrich August I. and Friedrich August II., ɔut as Kings of Poland were entitled Augustus II. (the Strong) and Augustus III. It is consequently obvious that the collectors' taste of the 18th. century, which beyond the artists of that time, only acknowledged the mature masters of the 16th. and 17th. centuries, holding in but little esteem the earlier schools, should still show itself in the majority of the pictures in our collection. However the Royal House of Saxony before the beginning of the 18th. century possessed in their »Kunstkammer« and palaces, a groundwork of pictures, among which the older masters were also represented, and the exertions of the 19th. century have succeeded not only in establishing a department in which contemporary artists are represented, but also in filling up the gaps in the earlier schools.

The history of the Dresden Gallery can in the light of the present be divided into three distinct periods, the first of which is, properly speaking, only introductory, and embracing the 16th. and 17th. centuries; the second the 18th. century, and the third the 19th. century.

We may fix the commencement of the first of the periods in the year 1560 when the Elector Augustus instituted a »Kunstkammer« above his suite of apartments in the palace at Dresden, which contained an extensive collection of all kinds of curiosities, such as at that time was always to be found at every princely court, and this first period of the history of our collection is consequently only a part of the history of the Kunstkammer, which did not cease to exist as such, although in 1722 the greater number of the best pictures belonging to it were removed to the Gallery. But the old inventories of the »Kunstkammer« prove that it was not until after the middle of the 17th. century, that any great number of valuable pictures was placed in it. According to the Inventory of 1587 besides the then newly acquired »16 schön gemalten Täflein« (»16 exquisitely painted little panels«) by Hans Bol, of which nine (Nos. 822—830 of the present catalogue) have lately been returned to the Gallery, the only important works by a well known master possessed by the Kunstkammer in that year were Adam and Eve by Lucas Cranach the Elder (Nos. 1911 and 1912); and according to the Inventory of 1640, with the exception of some pictures by unknown old German masters, the only additions were a few other important works by the same Cranach. That in the second half of the 17th. century and in the first ten years of the 18th. century, the art treasures of the »Kunstkammer« were greatly increased, is proved by the notice of »from the Kunstkammer« affixed to 284 pictures of the first Gallery-Inventory of 1722. Among these were however strikingly few works of note, least of all by Italian artists, and most from among the Dutch painters, some of whom, at any rate artists such as David Teniers the Younger (No. 1073), Gerard Dou (No. 1714) and Philips Wouwerman (Nos. 1419 and 1431) were already represented. The statement that our two fine landscapes of Claude Lorrain and principal Italian pictures were at that time in the Kunstkammer, has been proved to be erroneous.

The second period of the history of the Dresden Gallery, during which it was first established as such, begins with the accession of Augustus the Strong (1694) under whose auspices the best of the last named pictures of the »Kunstkammer« were obtained. In Dresden the Court Painter Samuel Bottschild (1642—1707) made the purchases, later they were undertaken by the Privy Counsellor Count Wackerbarth and General-Field-Marshall von Flemming, but principally by the »Chief Architect to the Electoral Court of Saxony« Baron Raymond le Plat. Abroad, Antwerp was at that time the principal resort of the Saxon agents for the purchase of pictures, for example in 1708 and 1709 the king bought a large number of excellent Flemish pictures through his »chief of Commissioner« Raschke, while the Italian pictures which he obtained came through the hands of a certain Kindermann. In this way, up to the year 1722, a choice collection of pictures had already been obtained. The artists at that time represented in the Royal Collection were, among the chief Flemish masters, Rubens (N°. 979), Jordaens (N°. 1009), Teniers (N°s. 1066, 1072, 1076, 1082, 1085, 1088), Van Dyck (N°s. 1022 and 1023), among the Dutch, Dou (N°s. 1706 and 1715), Metsu (N°. 1736), Terborch (N°. 1830), Bol (N°. 1606), and especially Wouwerman by whom were several pictures (N°s. 1413, 1419, 1427, 1428, 1430, 1451, 1452 and 1460) and J. D. de Heem (N°s. 1261, 1262 and 1267); among the Italians were Giorgione (N°. 185, finished by Titian), Cima da Conegliano (N°. 62), Francesco Albano (N°. 340) and many of the most modern artists of those days, and lastly of the French school N. Poussin (N°. 719).

Augustus the Strong now resolved to make an inventory of all his pictures, and to place the best of them together, with a view to the formation of an especial Picture Gallery. Under the direction of the before-mentioned »Chief Architect« Le Plat, in 1722 he caused the 1938 pictures which were designed to form the Gallery, to be hung in rooms specially prepared for the purpose in the second floor of the »Stallgebäude« in the Juden-Hof, and Le Plat and the Chamberlain Steinhäuser were also the first »Inspectors« of the Gallery. The latter was responsible for the inventory, and the result of his work is still to be seen in his excellent inventories, of which the first and chief not only contains a description of the pictures obtained up to 1722, but also those which had been added before 1728; the second and smaller one, besides descriptions of pictures purchased or presented before the close of 1741, also mentions those obtained from 1742 to 1747, not describing the latter, but numbering them, and as this original numbering of Steinhäuser has been preserved on a larger number of our pictures than is generally supposed, it has been a means of discovering the origin of many a picture which has hitherto been a matter of doubt. Le Plat was still the prime mover in the purchase of Gallery pictures, and he managed to collect such masterpieces from all quarters, that the Gallery at the time of the death of Augustus the Strong ranked with the finest collections of that date. By this time were to be found among the pictures Rembrandt's Samson (N°. 1560), and his »Portrait of himself with a sketchbook« (N°. 1569), Van Dyck's »Silenius intoxicated« (N°. 1017), J. Jordaens »Old and Young« (N°. 1014), Palma Vecchio's »Holy Family« (N°. 191) and »Venus reposing« (N°. 190), Guido Reni's »Venus and Cupid« (N°. 324), and Varotari's »Judith with the head of Holofernes« (N°. 525).

However the most brilliant epoch of the rise of the Gallery was in the time of Augustus III., the successor of Augustus the Strong, who during his thirty years government managed to gather together in his capital the greatest number of those masterpieces which have made the Dresden Gallery famous.

The King's all-powerful Minister Graf von Brühl now took the further purchases of pictures into his capable hands. The real judge of art at the Saxon Court, and Brühl's right eye, was his private secretary Carl Heinrich von Heinecken, the renowned author of »Nachrichten von Künstlern und Kunstsachen« and the »Dictionnaire des artistes«, the manuscript of which has been preserved in the Engraving Gallery. Under the direction of this man, there were Saxon agents for the purchase of pictures in all the art centres of Europe, in the capitals they were generally ambassadors, or their secretaries, to less important places artists or learned connoisseurs were sent. We must allow space for a short list of the masterpieces purchased during the reign of Augustus III.

In the first place, Italy was the principal scene of the activity displayed by the King's agents. In Venice they were superintended by the Saxon Ambassador Graf Villio. One of the most energetic of these agents was Ventura Rossi who in 1738 sent to Dresden 44 pictures, among them being Ribera's »St. Francis on a bed of thorns« (N°. 685); in 1741 he sent 70 pictures, including Paolo Farinati's »Presentation in the Temple« (N°. 223), and in 1744 he sent 65, two of these being Madonnas by Sassoferrato (N^os. 430 and 431). He was rivalled by the talented author Graf Algarotti who in 1743 travelled to Italy solely for the purpose of obtaining pictures for the Saxon Court. Although his acquisitions were fewer in number than those of Rossi, they were far more valuable, for among them were pictures such as Holbein's Madonna (N°. 1892), which even if it can no longer rank as an original, will nevertheless always be considered one of the ornaments of the Dresden Gallery, and the »Three Sisters« of Palma Vecchio (N°. 189).

All preceding and succeeding acquisitions were however thrown into the shade by Graf Villio, who through Ventura Rossi and the noted art-critic An. Maria Zanetti in Venice, purchased one hundred of the most important pictures from the world-renowned collection of Francis III., Duke of Modena in the year 1745. Through him, the Saxon Court, for a sum of 100,000 Zecchins, to which sum, certainly there were considerable additional charges, all at once came into possession of so choice a collection of the finest pictures by the greatest Italian masters, as up to that time, had not been seen north of the Alps. Among these art-treasures were all the Correggios of our collection, nearly all the pictures of Dosso Dossi and Garofalo, the principal works of Ann. Carracci, Guido Reni and Guercino, Titian's »Tribute Money« (N°. 169) and the finest portraits by this master, Paolo Veronese's four large pictures from the Cuccina family (N^{os}. 225—228), Andrea del Sarto's »Sacrifice of Abraham« (N°. 77) and Giulio Romano's »Madonna della Catina« (N°. 103), as well as some celebrated works not by Italian masters, for example, Holbein's »Portrait of Morette« (N°. 1890), the fine »Portrait of a man« by Velazquez (N°. 697) and Rubens' »St. Jerome« (N°. 955).

In the year 1746 these Modena pictures arrived in Dresden; but Augustus III. and Graf Brühl were far from considering that their purchases in Italy were now completed; in 1747 Zanetti purchased in Venice, among other pictures Titian's large »Santa Conversazione« (N°. 168) for Dresden; in 1748 Bern. Benzoni sent Gessi's Magdalene (N°. 355); in 1749 Pietro Guarienti, who was at that time Inspector of the Gallery, travelled himself into Upper Italy, and brought pictures back with him such as Palma Vecchio's »Holy Family with St. Catharine« (N°. 188); in 1750 the painter Siegm. Striebel in Rome, purchased the »Holy Family« by Garofalo (N°. 134), in 1752 the Canonicus L. Crespi sent Guido Reni's »Ninus and Semiramis« (N°. 325) from Bologna. The most successful of all these trusted agents was the Bolognese painter Carlo Cesare Giovannini, through whose exertions the Dresden Gallery in the year 1753, for the sum of 20,000 ducats, obtained its most celebrated picture, the Madonna of San Sisto by Raphael (N°. 93), which until this time had adorned the wall behind the high altar in the monastic church of San Sisto at Piacenza.

On this side the Alps there was a field of discovery in the immediate neighbourhood of Saxony, namely Bohemia. Firstly in 1741 Graf Waldstein's collection at Dux (268 pictures for 22,000 Gulden) was purchased; in this collection were the masterpiece of the Delft painter Jan Vermeer (N°. 1335) and the two excellent little portraits by Frans Hals (Nos. 1358 and 1359); these were followed in 1742 by 84 pictures from Prague, among them Fr. Snyders great picture of still life with the swan (N°. 1192); but the most important acquisitions from Prague were in the year 1749, when 69 pictures of the Imperial Gallery there, among them Ruben's noble »Boar hunt« (N°. 962) were purchased for Dresden for 50,000 Thalers.

The Secretary of Legation de Brais, and his manager Le Leu who had the advantage of being advised by the noted painter H. Rigaud, after 1742 made Paris the centre of their operations for the purchase of pictures. To begin with, in April of that year a number of valuable pictures from the personal estate of Prince Carignan were purchased for the sum of 86,346 Livres, among them being our two principal pictures by Carlo Dolci (Nos. 509 and 510), Poussin's »Adoration of the Magi« (N°. 717), Rembrandt's Portrait of his wife with a red flower (N°. 1562), Rubens' »Lion hunt« (N°. 972), and his »Garden of love« (N°. 976); in the same year together with other pictures, the portrait of Rubens' sons (N°. 975) was obtained from the Dubreuil collection. When de Brais died in that same year 1742, Le Leu continued the purchases in Paris alone. He sent for example, after 1749, pictures such as Rembrandt's portrait of himself with his wife on his knee (N°. 1559), Dou's »Violin player« (N°. 1707), and a number of Wouwerman's later works (Nos. 1417, 1424, 1444, 1446, 1448, 1463, 1464) to Dresden.

Naturally this extensive purchase of pictures required able managers under the chief direction of Brühl and Heinecken. To fill the vacancy caused by the death of Le Plat in 1742, the Bohemian master Johann Gottfried Riedel, who had been called to Dresden in 1739 as Court Painter, was appointed Inspector of the Royal Picture Gallery conjointly with old Steinhäuser, and Riedel had to begin his work with the superintendence of an enlargement of the building, as the rooms which had hitherto been used were quite inadequate to receive the influx of pictures collected during the past forty years. The alterations were made in the years 1744 to 1746, during which time the pictures were placed in the »Japanese Palace.« The upper part of the »Stallgebäude« (now called Museum Johanneum) was arranged as the Picture Gallery and there the pictures remained until after the middle of the 19th. century. Old Steinhäuser had the pleasure of receiving the art-treasures from Modena which arrived just at the time the new rooms were opened. He then retired into private life, and in his place, the Venetian artist and connoisseur Pietro Guarienti was chosen on September 10th. 1746, to act as inspector with Joh. Gottfried Riedel. Guarienti however died on the 27th. of May 1753, leaving the new inventory in the Italian language unfinished, and in his place, in consequence of the ever increasing press of business, two subinspectors were appointed to assist old Riedel, his son Joh. Ant. Riedel and Matthias Oesterreich, who already held an official position in the Engraving Gallery, and was the compiler of the Inventory of 1754. Old Riedel died on the 12th. of December 1755; and Oesterreich was appointed Director of the Gallery at Sanssouci in 1757. From this year to the beginning of the present century, Joh. Anton Riedel took the sole management of the Gallery, a post which did not tax the strength of one man too heavily, as in consequence of the outbreak of the Seven Years War, the purchase of pictures naturally closed. But he had enough to do to take care of the pictures during the war; in 1759 by Riedel's direction they were packed in cases and sent to Königstein, and they were not brought back to Dresden till 1763, immediately after the peace of Hubertsburg.

The King and his counsellor Graf Brühl now made immediate preparations for the further acquisition of pictures, but in Oktober of the same year 1763 both died, and with this ended the Saxon purchase of pictures for the rest of the century.

The long reign of Frederick Augustus the Just carries the history of the Dresden Gallery well into the 19th. century. Joh. Anton Riedel did not die until 1816. He deserves much credit for his restoration of damaged pictures, and in connection with the Inspector of the Engraving Gallery Chr. Fr. Wenzel he published the »Catalogue des tableaux de la Galerie électorale de Dresde« which was good of its kind, and after 1804 wrote a new complete descriptive catalogue of the Gallery, in two volumes, of which the manuscript is still preserved. Still more important than Riedel's works, was however the first great genuine Gallery publication of engravings, which was published by no less a person than C. H. von Heinecken himself, after 1750. The most celebrated engravers of the time were pressed into the service, most of them engraved their plates at a distance, from drawings made in Dresden by the Court Painter Ch. Hutin. The first volume of this comprehensive work (Receuil d'Estampes d'après les plus celèbres tableaux de la Galerie Royale de Dresde) appeared in 1753; the second followed in 1757; the third not until our own time. Using this work, the »Catalogue« of 1765 and the writings on art-history of Hagedorn, de Piles and d'Argensville as a basis, the secretary of the General-Staff at Dresden, Johann August Lehninger compiled the »Abrégé« which appeared in 1782, and was honoured as the first scientific Catalogue of the Dresden Gallery, until Jul. Hübner showed the mechanical nature of its origin.

The third period of the Royal Saxon Picture Gallery belongs entirely to the 19th. century. Inspector Joh. Ant. Riedel died, as already mentioned in 1816, but even in 1811 an assistant was given him, the Sub-Inspector Carl Friedrich Demiani, who rose to be Chief-Inspector in 1816. When Demiani died in 1823, Joh. Friedrich Matthäi, a celebrated historical painter of his time, who had been Professor since 1810, and for a time Director of the Royal Academy of Arts, was appointed Director of the Gallery. Under his direction, the most celebrated restorer of that date, Pietro Palmaroli of Rome, was called to Dresden, to restore a number of the most important pictures in the Gallery, a task which he performed with much ability. During Matthäi's direction, and by order of the Minister of State, B. von Lindenau, a thorough examination of the »Reserve« was made in 1834, and on this occasion many fine pictures were brought to light which had either been previously unnoticed, or had been purchased by degrees, and these were assigned to the Gallery, so that in Matthäi's Catalogue of 1835, good of its kind, a considerable increase of the collection can be noticed. During his direction the Gallery-Commission was finally instituted, which in later years having been constituted a public means for purchasing pictures, took part in all further acquisitions to the Gallery, as well as superintending the work of restoration.

When Matthäi died in Vienna, while travelling, on the 23rd. of October, 1845, Julius Schnorr von Carolsfeld an excellent artist, was called from Munich where he was at that time staying, to Dresden, to take the offices of Director of the Academy and of the Gallery. He undertook both offices in the year 1846, and it was only now that the third period of the Dresden Gallery began to grow and show signs of new life, the seed for which had been sown in the previous ten years. The absolute necessity for a new building had long made itself felt. After long discussion the commission for it was given to Professor Gottfried Semper, at that time Director of the School of Architecture in Dresden; in the year 1847 it was commenced, and in 1855 the new building which contains the present Picture Gallery, was opened to the public. Julius Hübner, at that time, a Member of the Commission and Professor in the Academy, was commissioned to write a new catalogue. The first edition of Hübner's Catalogue appeared in 1856, the fifth in 1880, and in 1884 it was reprinted. Julius Schnorr von Carolsfeld retired from the directorship of the Gallery in 1871, and died in the following year. His successor was Julius Hübner, under whose direction the Gallery remained for ten years. Hübner retired in 1882, and died the same year. He was succeeded by the author of the present Catalogue.

During the period since Schnorr undertook the management, a considerable number of pictures, some old, some modern, from various sources has been added to the Gallery. As to the older pictures, there was a purchase in London of fifteen pictures of the Spanish School, from the personal estate of King Louis Philippe of France, in 1853; among these were masterpieces such as Zurbaran's St. Bonaventura (N°. 696), and Murillo's St. Rodriguez (N°. 704); and in 1860 these were followed by some fine pictures formerly in the possession of the picture-dealer S. Woodburne in London; Piero di Cosimo's »Holy Family« (N°. 20), then attributed to Luca Signorelli, and Lorenzo di Credi's »Holy Family« (N°. 13), later attributed without any reason to Leonardo da Vinci; in 1865 the beautiful little Crucifixion of Dürer (N°. 1870) was purchased in Vienna. Between 1870 and 1880—84, money flowed freely, large sums having been voted from the French war indemnity. Among the old Italian pictures acquired during this time, those specially worthy of notice are, St. Sebastian by Antonello da Messina (N°. 52), the painted pilasters of Luca Signorelli (N°. 36 and 37), the splendid Portrait by Paolo Morando (N°. 201), Mazzolino's brilliant »Christ presented to the people« (N°. 123), and Andrea Mantegna's beautiful »Virgin and Child with the Infant John« (N°. 51); among the Dutch pictures, »Hagar« by Jan Steen (N°. 1727), the »Two Cavaliers« by Th. de Keyser (N°. 1543), the »Still life« by Heda (N°. 1365) and the Landscape by Jan van der Meer van Haarlem (N°. 1507).

The first step towards furthering the purchase of modern pictures was taken by the former Minister of State, and General-Director, von Lindenau, who, in the year 1843, when he retired, devoted 700 Thalers of his pension yearly, to the purchase of pictures for the Gallery, by living artists. For instance the Dresden Gallery has this »Lindenau-Endowment« to thank for A. L. Richter's »Bridal Procession« (N°. 2221), and Julius Hübner's »Golden Age« (N°. 2227).

It was then decided by the Council of the Academy on the 31st. of March 1848, to devote half the receipts of each Academic Exhibition to the purchase of pictures which had been exhibited; and in this manner the Gallery came into possession amongst other pictures, of Grosse's »Leda« (N°. 2268), Kummer's »Scotch Landscape« (N°. 2237), Lier's »Moonlight Landscape« (N°. 2327), and Choulant's »Church of St. Peter« (N°. 2263).

Also through the Public Art Fund, endowed by the country, pictures were acquired in 1860 — 1870; for example, Hübner's »Disputation between Luther and Dr. Eck« (N°. 2229), and Hofmann's »Woman taken in adultery brought before Christ« (N°. 2254).

But it was only after the before-mentioned grant of an important Special Fund, which was principally for the purpose of purchasing good modern pictures, that any number of striking works by living artists, was acquired, and so it is only during the last ten years, that one by one, those modern pictures have been added to the Gallery, which now cause this department to rival attraction the older portion. It would lead as away o far to take special notice of these pictures singly. may here be remarked that the fund at that time voted as expended by 1884, so that since this time the Gallery as been dependent, for the purchase of new pictures, on ne sums which may have been voted afresh during each nancial epoch.

Side by side with these acquisitions through public nds, we may place since 1880, the purchases from the ncome derived from the Pröll-Heuer Endowment. The ainter Max. Heinr. Ed. Pröll, who was named after his oster-father, the artist's colourman Anton Heuer, Pröll-Heuer, left the Gallery at his death in 1879, a consider-ble sum as an endowment, from the proceeds of which, ictures approved by the Academic Council, were yearly to e bought from the Dresden Academic Exhibition, and the Gallery has to thank this Endowment for about two dozen f the best pictures by modern masters, acquired during he last few years.

Of bequests and presentations within the last few ears, we will only name two, Moritz Winkler's bequest, y means of which, in 1884 nine pictures at once, among hem masterpieces of Andreas and Oswald Achenbach (Nos. 2297 and 2311) found place in the Gallery; and Professor Bertram's presentation, by which in 1882 it was enriched by five capital pictures of Anton Graff (Nos. 2173—2177).

The time has not yet arrived to go into particulars of other circumstances in the history of the administration during the last ten years. The efforts of the present and the results therefrom, must be left to the future to estimate.

* The Early Christian Byzantine School has transmitted to our own times its stiff and mechanical style, in all countries of the Greek Church, not only in those where Greek is spoken, but also in those of the Sclavonic tongue. Although leaving this School its original place at the beginning of the Catalogue, on account of its early commencement, there is no reason to consider that our pictures in particular, though the first three were certainly acquired in the 17th. century, are of such high antiquity that they have an especial right to this place.

B. The Great Painters of the Antwerp School.

Peter Paul Rubens. Born at Siegen (of an Antwerp family) 1577, died at Antwerp 1640. Pupil of Tobias Verhaegt, Ad. van Noort and Otto van Veen in Antwerp. Chief master of the Antwerp School.

As Rubens in his work, used to avail himself to a very great extent of the assistance of his pupils, and the line between his own work and that done in his studio is more difficult to draw than in the case of any other master, we therefore place first on the list, all the pictures which we believe to have proceeded directly from his studio, while briefly noting the probable share he took in the painting of each picture; the second place we have given to a group of pictures emanating from Rubens, which can only be looked upon as copies by strange hands, and the third place is occupied by those pictures which we can only suppose to be the work of unknown masters of the School of Rubens.

That the first original of this picture is the one in the possession of the Princess Karl in Darmstadt, is acknowledged, by all, including the author of the preceding Catalogue; and that our picture cannot be a replica by the master's own hand, but only a most excellent later, slightly altered copy, is clearly proved (as the majority of connoisseurs agree with us), by the difference in the style of painting of the picture, as well as by external evidence. D. The Saxon School.

Lukas Kranach the Elder, correctly L. Müller, not Sunder. Born at Kronach 1472, died at Weimar 1553. Founder of the Saxon School in Wittenberg.

The studio sign of the master, a winged serpent, is also found on the pictures of Lukas Kranach the Younger, and even upon pictures not painted by the hand of either the elder or the younger Kranach. Whether a picture with the sign, is by the hand of Lukas Kranach the Elder, or Lukas Kranach the Younger, or only from the studio of one or the other, can therefore only be decided by internal evidence, unless the date or the origin of the picture should supply any reliable information.

PART II.

MODERN PICTURES.

SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE 19TH. CENTURY.

Digitized by Google

Note.

The difficulties of arranging the German artists of the nineteenth Century, according to schools, were by no means ignored, the chief cause of these difficulties being the habit of German artists, both as students and a masters, frequently to change their place of abode. The artist's birthplace, naturally, hardly ever afforded any data, and not always even, the place where he received his artistic education. In any case it seemed necessary to place those masters who have worked, or are working in the formation of schools, in the group to which their sphere of action belongs. In some doubtful cases the character of the master's painting, in others, the place where that very picture which is in the Dresden Gallery originated, had to suffice for our object. At all events the endeavour to make this classification seemed too instructive, to be abandoned because of its difficulties; the more so as cases where doubt exists only form exceptions.

I. Old Flemish Tapestries.

Six hangings from the beginning of the 16th. Century. It is not known who originated the designs for them, but for the four larger (a, b, c, d) Quinten Massys has been suggested, and they certainly appear to belong to his time and school, Hendrik Bles (Civetta) has been mentioned for the two smaller (e, f) but he was however in no way connected with them.

a) The Crucifixion of Christ.
3,36 h.; 3,29 w.

b) Christ bearing his cross.
3,44 h.; 3,38 w.

c) The adoration of the shepherds.
3,47 h.; 3,36 w.

d) The Ascension of Christ.
3,42 h.; 3,33 w.

e) The Ascension of Christ.
2,96 h.; 2,88 w.

f) The institution of the Lord's Supper.
3,05 h.; 2,84 w.

II. The Raphael Tapestries.

These are replicas of six out of the ten tapestries, representing scenes from the Acts of the Apostles, which Leo X. caused to be woven in Brussels, for the walls of the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican, from the cartoons painted by Raphael in 1515—1516, seven of which are still preserved in the South Kensington Museum in London. Our six replicas, the borders of which with figures of Apostles &c., cannot be traced back to Raphael, but point to the 17th. Century, were produced at this later period, and perhaps woven in England. At least they came from England to Paris and from Paris in 1723 to Dresden.

g) The healing of the lame man. Acts ch. III, v. 1.
4,23 h.; 6,35 w.

h) The punishment of Elymas. Acts ch. XIII, v. 6—12.
4,23 h.; 3,30 w.

i) The sacrifice at Lystra. Acts ch. XIX, v. 8—18.
4,23 h.; 6,35 w.

k) The miraculous draught of fishes. Luke ch. V, v. 1—11.
4,23 h.; 5,00.

l) »Feed my sheep.« John ch. XXI, v. 15—24.
4,23 h.; 6,15 w.

m) St. Paul preaching at Athens. Acts ch. XVII, v. 22—32.
4,23 h.; 5,25 w.

Addenda and Errata.

Page 49 No. 292. Since publication Professor Schmarsow has expressed his opinion that this picture does not belong to the school of Leonardo da Vinci, or even to the Milanese School, but to the Ferrarese, and is even by the hand of Dosso Dossi. With this latter opinion we can scarcely agree, but the former is worthy of consideration. See Addenda to the Unabridged Catalogue page 823 — 824.
